

Britain Seeking American Assistance to Thwart Japan's Designs on China

WASHINGTON—Behind the quiet one-hour conference between robust Sir Ronald Lindsay and slim Acting Secretary Phillips were some of the most important developments in the foreign policy of the Roosevelt Administration.

It explained a lot of things, among them the recent break with Russia, the tremendous naval program, American aloofness in the Pacific.

What the British Ambassador wanted to know was whether the United States would join Great Britain and other Powers in extending financial aid to China, to head off Japan's taking a stranglehold mortgage on the country.

The Ambassador had given Phillips an advance indication regarding his proposition, and Phillips had discussed the question at the White House. What he said, therefore, came direct from the President.

His answer was a definite "No." Sir Ronald countered by pointing out that China was suffering because of the Roosevelt policy of raising the price of silver. He also emphasized what was much more important, that a Japanese loan to China meant that Japan would swallow up China.

Phillips, in effect, replied: "China is too big to be swallowed. Japan will find herself throwing money into a bag without a bottom."

Nagging the British

The nature of Sir Ronald's visit was public property. But what most people did not realize was that it was a tremendous victory for Roosevelt diplomacy. For nearly two years Henry L. Stimson had been nagging at the British, trying to secure from them a common Anglo-American policy in the Far East. During that time the British, despite a huge economic stake in China, sat complacently on the sidelines. They enjoyed watching their chestnuts being pulled out of the fire by the United States.

Roosevelt reversed all that. He remained aloof in the Orient. Now the British are nagging at the State Department in the same way Stimson used to nag at them. Roosevelt policy in the Far East now can be summarized as follows:

1. Build up a gigantic Navy. To accomplish this Roosevelt completely disregarded his own stipulation that Public Works should create employment. Instead, large hunks of FWA money were set aside for warships which—two years later—are not beyond the blueprint stage and have not employed a single workman.
2. Avoid all understandings with foreign countries, even indirectly.

(This was behind the recent debt break with Russia.)

3. Forget the Philippines if necessary in order to keep out of trouble in the Orient.

Anglo-American Alliance?

Of these, the policy which has come in for most secret discussion lately is that regarding understandings with foreign countries. The State Department leans toward such understandings in a mild way. The Navy does not. Secretary Hull has made it apparent that American sympathies in the Far East are with the British. Some of his chief advisers believe that the affinity between the Dominions and the United States, the distrust which Australia and Canada have of Japan, makes the English-speaking peoples natural allies.

With this the General Board of the Navy emphatically disagrees. In fact, some Admirals have been much provoked that Admiral Standley, Chief of Naval Operations, and head sea-dog of the Navy, cooperated so closely with the British.

AKRON LAWYER PAYS PENALTY FOR POISONING

Shank Goes Calmly to Electric Chair in Little Rock Prison

SLEW 4 IN FAMILY

Wife Collapses at News of Execution

LITTLE ROCK, Ark., Mar. 8.—Mark Shank, picnic poisoner of four members of the Alvin Colley family, died in the electric chair at Tucker prison farm today at 7:14 a. m.

Shank walked to the chair calmly and indifferently refused to make any final statement. About fifty persons watched the execution.

Mrs. Geraldine Shank, the convicted man's wife, was unable to be present when her husband went to his death. Governor Futrell had promised to hold up the execution until she could reach Arkansas, if she desired, to visit the condemned man once more, but she refused when the governor said he would offer no hope of executive clemency.

Shank who was 43 years old and a lawyer from Akron, Ohio, poisoned Colley, his wife and two sons at a picnic on August 15, 1933.

Pleaded Insanity

Shank was captured by Little Rock, Ark., police who happened along just as Colley collapsed at the wheel of his automobile after having drunk poisoned fruit juice. The lawyer confessed to poisoning the family, but pleaded insanity. He was convicted in 1933, but was granted four stays of execution before a new date was set for his death.

KENT, March 8.—Unable to go to her husband to spend the last hours before death with him, Mrs. Geraldine Shank collapsed here today when informed that Mark Shank had been executed for the "poison picnic" murders of the Alvin Colley family in Arkansas.

Mrs. Shank was brought to a private home here from Akron last night and immediately placed under the care of two nurses.

Physicians would permit no one to see or talk with the stricken woman, but her attorney, Blake Cook, said she had collapsed and was in a serious condition.

MEDINA, March 8.—On a farm at Creston, a few miles from Medina, five-year-old Clyde Colley, the sole survivor of the Arkansas "poison picnic," played today, blissfully ignorant of the execution of Mark Shank.

HUEY'S TALK PLEASES HUEY

Attacks Roosevelt, Johnson, New Deal and About Everyone Else

WASHINGTON March 8.—Senator Huey P. Long admitted today he was "greatly pleased" with his blistering attack on President Roosevelt's New Deal made over the radio late last night in answer to Brig. Gen. Hugh S. Johnson's condemnation of him and the Rev. Charles E. Coughlin.

Johnson accused Long and Detroit's "radio priest" with preaching revolutionary policies that would lead the country to ruin and openly charged they were working together.

Instead of lashing out at the former recovery administrator Long concentrated his attack on the administration and exclaimed the New Deal "is more like the St. Vitus dance."

"God save us from two more years of the disaster we've had under that gang," Long shouted.

Long accused the White House of ordering Johnson to attack him and while he stood in front of the microphone delivering his oral attack he was surrounded by two bodyguards and 50 spectators about 25 of whom officials said were "Long's friends."

He referred to Johnson as "the late lamented the pampered crown prince . . . loaned by Wall Street to run the government." He also mentioned Mrs. Roosevelt as being among those who are running the government.

DAVEY BUDGET NINE MILLIONS ABOVE WHITE'S

Over 59 Millions Needed for Two Years, Governor Tells Solons

OFFICE COST HIGHER

None of Money to Come From Sales Tax

COLUMBUS, Mar. 8.—Operation of the government of Ohio during the 1935-36 biennium will cost the taxpayers $59,212,558 on the basis of executive budget estimates released today by Governor Davey and Finance Director Bevis.

Budget recommendations actually amount to $51,659,487, or approximately $8,700,000 in excess of the appropriation for the 1933-34 biennium. The remaining seven and a half million is accounted for by over-hanging appropriations made by the last general assembly and by restoration of the state employees salary reductions.

In recommending the $51,659,487 biennial expenditure, the governor did not take into account restoration of the salary cuts which the tone of his transmittal message to the legislature indicated he still hopes to avoid.

Reduction Out of Picture

Decisively defeated in the Senate finance committee and reported to be no more highly esteemed in the lower house, the Davey salary reduction bill seems completely and permanently out of the picture. Realizing this, the finance director reserved three millions of anticipated revenue to pay status.

LONDON, March 8.—The rebellious crew of the Greek armored cruiser Averoff, flagship of the insurgent forces in the Greek civil war, today seized the Turkish steamer Konya in the harbor of Mytilene, island of Lesbos, it was stated in a Central News dispatch from Istanbul.

The seizure was made in reprisal for Turkey's recent action in holding two Greek vessels suspected of conveying stores to the rebel warships.

ROME, March 8.—The third great nation to take protective measures in view of the civil war raging in Greece, Italy today dispatched three warships to Greece water to guard Italian interests in the Aegean.

Premier Mussolini sent the cruiser Trentino and the destroyers Damosto and Pigafetta to the scene of action. Great Britain and France previously had dispatched warships to Greek waters.

ATHENS, Mar. 8.—Rebel infantry fought bitterly today in spite of zero weather to push a path through the government lines on the Thracian front and regain Salonika, now regarded as the key to the rebellion, according to meager dispatches received here.

While the government insisted that only the weather prevented an immediate movement that would annihilate the rebels, other reports indicated that the loyal troops had suffered one or two reverses.

It was confirmed officially today that rebel warships had occupied three Aegean islands yesterday, thus placing the forces of former Premier Eleutherios Venizelos in control of Crete, and Samos, Chios and Lesbos off the coast of Asiatic Turkey.

Venizelos was reported ready to proclaim an independent republic on Crete if the rest of the revolt collapsed.

A British warship and one of three French ships have arrived at Phaleron to protect their nationals.

DIAZ, MEXICAN CHURCH HEAD, BEING HUNTED

Fails to Return to Residence, Friends Believe He Is To Be Deported

MEXICO CITY, March 8.—Archbishop Pascual Diaz, titular head of the Catholic church in Mexico, failed to return to his residence today from a nearby town, and friends said he probably had been "intercepted," allegedly by police.

Rumors spread that the prelate was to be expelled to the United States, but these reports could not be confirmed, and government authorities denied knowledge of his whereabouts.

Archbishop Diaz was last reported to have been seen outside the suburb of Villa De Guadalupe, motoring back from the town of Cuatitlan, twenty miles from Mexico City. Friends who searched fruitlessly for him declared that he had been intercepted by several automobiles there. From that point they lost trace of him, in spite of enquiries at police headquarters and the ministry of the interior.

The archbishop, a 58-year-old Jalisco Indian, rose to the episcopate from the ranks of the Jesuits. He has led the church in its fight against socialist education and suppression of church activities. Recently he paid a $150 fine for saying mass in a suburb, authorities charging that he was authorized to say mass only in the cathedral in Mexico City.

Lutherans Take Part in Interesting Club Session

March meeting of Trinity Lutheran brotherhood held last evening in the parish house on E. Mound-st. was a blustery one in point of interest and enthusiasm.

After the opening ceremonies, the report of the committee on revision of the constitution, was read and provoked quite a lot of argument and after several minor amendments, was given the first reading, preparatory to its adoption.

Almost the allotted time for the entire session was taken up with this matter, but the time limit was disregarded and the program as planned was carried out.

At this juncture, John W. Walters and his committee of eight members refreshed the members with a service of hamburgers, cheese and coffee.

Program Interesting

The chairman then introduced E. C. Ebert, who had charge of the entertainment, his group being made up of all members whose names begin with the letters "A" to "F" inclusive.

The first number, a trumpet solo, by Howard Ater was well received.

R. L. Brehmer was next on the program and took as his subject, "Does a man stop learning at Forty-Eight," explaining his venture into a new game at that age, most interestingly discussing hybridizing, effect of light and making plants bloom out of season.

Mr. Brehmer's statements relative to recent developments of Soviet Russia on hybridizing of wheat, now producing perennial wheat that possibly will not have to be reseeded for at least four or five years and will produce as much as one hundred bushel per acre, were most interesting. Mr.

Brehmer demonstrated his talk by use of plants grown in his own greenhouses. The audience was so interested that Mr. Brehmer will be asked to follow up this subject at a future meeting.

E. C. Ebert next on the program, substituted singing "Any Old Port in a Storm" for talk that he had prepared to the new "Stooge" organization in Circleville. After some intimation as to formation and working of this organization, the curiosity of the membership was aroused and even though the hour was late, Mr. Ebert consented to also give a short talk on this subject, revealing the much benefit that the boys are receiving from this club, also inviting all who desire to meet with them at the high school building on Friday at 3 o'clock and witness the outburst of enthusiasm that will be displayed by this organization.

Next April 11th

The next brotherhood meeting will be held on April 11th, with George C. Griffith as program chairman, his assistants as program members whose names begin with the letters "G" to "K" inclusive.

POEMS READ BY MRS. GEO. THURN

A PRAYER FOR A WOMAN KIND

God give each true good woman
Her own small house to love and keep
No heart should ache with longing
No hurt should go too deep
Give her age old desire
A house to love and keep.

Give her a man beside her
A kind man and true
And let them love and work together
A lifetime through
And let her mother children
As gentle women do.

Give her a shelf for her dishes
A shining box for her bread
A white cloth for her table
And a white spread for her bed
A shaded lamp at night fall
And a row of books much read.

God let her work in laughter
And let her rest in sleep
No life can surely offer
A peace more sure and deep
God give each true good woman
Her own small house to love and keep.

—By Grace Noll Crowell

THREE SQUARE MEALS A DAY

A man can't live on love alone
A man can't live on thought
A man can't live on liberty
No odds how dearly bought
All these are nothing to a man
I don't care what you say
Unless he manages to get
Three square meals a day.

A man can lose his pile entire
And never turn a hair
But if the ham and eggs are cold
There's brimstone in the air
A man can lose his teeth his hair his friends
And still be gay if he just manages to get
Three square meals a day.

A man can wear a smiling face
Above a broken heart
A man can grin and bear the pain
When fondlest hopes depart
The only thing that downs a man
And puts him out to stay
Is separating him for keeps from
Three square meals a day.

Now some want gold
And some want fame
And some want liberty
But all mankind in every clime
On this one want agree
For be they slaves or emperors
Young men or sages gray
There's not one of them but want
Three square meals a day!

CONTRACT BRIDGE

By E. V. SHEPARD, Famous Bridge Teacher

VIOLATING ELEMENTARY PRINCIPLES

THERE are certain elementary principles which never should be violated without just cause. Even players whom their friends rate as good frequently are guilty of needless violations of sound rules of procedure. Two important rules are as follows:

1. Unless strong enough to outbid, or to defeat adverse game bids, pass a low contract at your left which cannot go game at the score.
2. Pass an adverse game bid if unable to defeat a slam contract which may result from further bidding on your part.

The two hands shown today illustrate the danger of violating these two sound rules.

each minor suit.
Bidding went: North, 1-Spades; East, 2-Hearts; South, 4-Spades, which East should have passed, but he bid 5-Hearts; South, 5-Spades; certainly East should have taken warning and passed, but again he overbid, calling 6-Hearts; South, 6-Spades, although vulnerable; East doubled, ending bidding.

The opening lead was the K of clubs. Dummy won the trick. Two rounds of spades took all opposing trumps. East was given a trick with his J of clubs. Now East led his Q of hearts. Dummy's Ace won. A low club was led. North ruffed. Both opposing clubs fell, leaving dummy with two long clubs, upon which to discard two of the declarer's diamonds.

The declarer took his K of hearts. Dummy ruffed his hand. East's folly in overbidding, then in doubling, cost his side 750 points for the small slam plus 150 points for doubled trick score.

DISTANT UTOPIA

DR. TOWNSEND, the author of the widely-heralded plan for the relief of poverty and the circulation of money, has experienced difficulty in meeting the rather practical questions raised by the senate finance committee. In consequence it is improbable that we will leap from the worst depression in history into the millennium.

Nevertheless, he is confident that his scheme will work and that a $200-a-month pension to every person over sixty, including, presumably, John D. Rockefeller, Andrew Mellon, Henry Ford and others in somewhat similar financial circumstances, will lead us finally to the frontiers of Utopia.

Asked how an elderly couple, for example, would, in meeting the requirements of the plan, spend $4,800 a year, Dr. Townsend responded: "Buy a car, rebuild their home, furnish it, buy some books, get things for their children."

That would suffice for the first year, but the mind of the author of the scheme was not sufficiently fertile to devise a spending program for the second, third and successive years, nor was he able, confronted with the arithmetical problem of financing the plan, caring for ten million or more aged persons at an annual cost of $24,000,000,000 a year, to point the way to fulfillment.

So, it seems, we are back at the starting point and Utopia is not just around the corner, mess, of course, Huey Long succeeds in dividing the country's wealth so that every deserving family would have at least $5,000 free of debt.

A TYPE OF BLACKMAIL

THE GROWING tendency among legislatures throughout the country to control the racket involved in breach of promise litigation is a wholesome sign which calls for public approbation. These suits often represents a more or less genteel form of blackmail and in far too many instances they have succeeded in the accomplishment of their purpose.

In Illinois, a judge and two legislative leaders have drawn measures intended to correct weaknesses in law and procedure dealing with marriage and divorce which encourage alienation and breach of promise suits. Ohio and Indiana are working toward the same end, while the Bar Association of New York proposes changes in the law to restrict damages in breach of promise actions to expenses paid or incurred in contemplation of marriage.

Women who resort to the heart-balm shakedown are of a recognizable type. For the prospect of reaping easy-profits, they make a great show of their broken hearts and blighted hopes and, in doing so, forfeit their personal pride and self-respect for cash considerations. It is encouraging to know that the law at last has gotten around to the task of doing something about this situation.

SUPERIOR PEOPLE

THE FILIPINOS, in the opinion of Governor General Frank Murphy, who is home for a brief visit after nearly two years in the islands, are a superior race. In support of this conclusion he offers what seems to be the most convincing sort of evidence.

During his two years in the Philippines, Mr. Murphy says, the government's expenditures have been less than its income and there have been no increases in taxes. Their experiments in government under the provisional form of rule given them by this country show their astuteness in politics and he anticipates success if they are given executive as well as legislative power.

If the Filipinos are actually living within their income and avoiding the necessity of increasing taxes their status as a superior people hardly can be questioned. They should not only be given full authority to administer their own government but they might even be given some kind of a protectorate over ours.

GYPSY GIRL

THE STORY OF AN IMPASSIONED ROMANCE

McDONALD FEADER

READ THIS FIRST:

Consuelo, a beautiful gypsy girl, longs to dance with all the world at her feet. In love with her are the Dummies, a deal mate, and Marcu, both members of her tribe. She has only hate for her mother, Anica, but is extremely fond of her father, Girtza. The father repudiates Anica for her treatment of Consuelo.

(NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY)

CHAPTER 3

A DILAPIDATED old hamper, pushed in one corner out of the way, was dragged forth and opened. Consuelo searched through it, pulling forth tawdry clothing, discarded trinkets and scraps of brilliant silk that had been saved for some possible use. In the bottom of the hamper was a package, the paper soiled and old. She picked it out and then tossed the other things back. With eager hands she undid the package and stared at the lovely article it held. For a moment she knelt motionless, then her fingers caressed the folds with tender awe. A forbidden garment, her mother's wedding skirt. It had been the best silk that money could buy and through the years its brilliant colors had never faded or spoiled. Five yards of loveliness, gathered and caught in by the belt.

She drew the silk thing up in her arms and held it to her and the feel of the silk against her arms was good.

She was very beautiful as she knelt there, her long hair falling about her to the floor like folds of rumpled black velvet, her eyes closed, the lashes making shadows on her cheeks. The loose blouse she wore had slipped from one shoulder exposing the full line of her throat. There was a quietude about her now that brought peace into her face, that stilled the animation but left there a radiant glow of satisfaction. So might she have looked after her lover had kissed her or so might she look when she attained the marble palace on top of the high hill and her ideal had been fulfilled to the very utmost.

But only for a moment did the Madonna-like attitude exist, for the next she was on her feet and with nimble fingers tore her own skirt from her and flung it to the floor. Off came the blouse which was replaced by a newer, more gaudy one. Then the beloved skirt was fastened about the slim waist.

More anklets were added; scarf bracelets; more beads; a gay scarf about her head leaving the dusty hair free. Into her ears went earrings, great gold loops that drew the lobes of her ears into pearl-like drops. She shook her head and the earrings and the bangles and the beads touched and the chorus of beclinging and anklets.

Digging among her things she produced a small bottle of eau de cologne and poured the liquid down her neck, disregarding the wet splashes that oozed through on her blouse. She inhaled deep of the heady scent. She hid the bottle again and placed the broken mirror on a box and thoughtfully viewed herself.

She turned this way and that, lips puckered. Her girle of body, stripes was adjusted, the wrinkles of the skirt were flattened out; a curl was dampened and patted on her forehead. Now she turned again and very slowly began to smile and the smile said, "I'm beautiful!" Satisfied, she whirled around on her toes, arms flung out. The jingle of the ornaments was music in her ears.

"I am happy," she murmured to herself. "Oh, but I'm happy!" She laughed aloud and began to half chant, half sing, improvising tune and words as she went along. "Only going to dance at gorgio fair, I am, but that doesn't matter. There will be people and they will clap for me, throw dimes, maybe a half dollar or two and the young white chaos will flit with me and I will flit back at them and Marcu will be furious and scowl and threaten and I will laugh in his face and snap my fingers at him and I will pick some nice young man with money to buy me lemonade and ice cream and he will be afraid of me but afterwards he will boast to his friends that he treated the gypsy girl and tell how bad are the gypsies, how they carry knives in their belts and speak a language the gorgios don't understand and so the gorgios hate them—all but the gypsy girls and these they give hold am a bad gypsy girl but I am as beautiful as a spicy red carnation. Men love me but I hate them all. I'm as free as the wind and like the wind I dance! Dance! Dance!

At that moment Anica drew aside the curtains. Her eyes took in the whirling laughing girl. At first the full significance of the outrage did not penetrate her mind, then she remembered. The silk skirt. Her wedding skirt! A cry of rage fell from her lips.

"What are you doing with that?" The laughter stopped. The whirling stopped, but the skirt went on merrily winding itself around the legs, the situation. "That's my wedding skirt!" Anica shrieked, still not quite comprehending the situation. "Yes? I thought so, my mother." Bravado, bravado she was shaking. "What have you got it on for?" "I'm going to dance in it this afternoon." She moved toward the end of the van.

Anica gasped. "You are not!" She stepped in front of the van's only exit.

"Why not?" demanded Consuelo, trying to pass her. "Because it's mine!" She caught the girl by the shoulders and shoved her against the wall. "You'll not wear it, thief!" "Oh, yes, I will! Let go of me—you're hurting!" The grip tightened. Inch by inch Anica forced her down against a pile of old rags.

"Take it off!" she commanded. "I won't! Let go of me! What are you trying to do anyway?" "I'm not trying to do anything—I'm doing it!" She reached up. Her hand gripped the whip from the rack. She poised over the girl who held high, face red and ugly. "Now take it off!" "I won't! Get out of my way!" Consuelo shouted.

For answer the whip cracked across the shoulders and back of the girl. Consuelo screamed. Again the whip fell. Beads of sweat dropped from the woman's face.

Again the whip fell. The girl was not screaming now but lay half stunned from surprise and pain. Red, ugly welts rose, the blood showing through the skin. Again the whip fell. Then frenzied, senses reeling, she sprang for her mother, grabbed her around the hips and the two rolled to the dusty floor of the van. Like a tigress the girl struggled on top, her slim fingers clutching the oily black hair.

The woman dropped the whip and together they grappled and rolled on the floor. Anica grabbed the skirt and her fingers tore at the belt until the fastenings gave way. The skirt tumbled in the struggling legs. Like animals the two screamed at each other, tussling, rolling, fingernails drawing blood.

There was a shriek from Anica as a stream of blood rolled down her cheek. She loosened her clutch from the skirt and, screaming like a mad woman, grasped the girl's throat.

"I'll kill you now!" she cried. The curtains of the van were thrust apart and Marcu sprang to the two. He pulled Anica from the girl and flung her against the wall. "In the name of God what are you doing, old fool?"

The woman fell panting and bleeding; the breath half knocked from her. "Get out of here!" she gasped. "Let me kill her now!" Again she sprang for the inert girl.

Marcu's foot stopped her and she sank groaning to the floor. He picked Consuelo up in his arms. There was a strange pallor under his tawny skin. He carried her from the van to a nearby bucket of water. "Come here, some of you!" he shouted, voice unsteady.

He threw water in the girl's face. She groaned and, gasping, began to draw the breath back into her lungs. Girtza was the first one of the quiet circle to move. His face was old and grim as he started for the van.

A few moments later the screams of a woman told that the long neglected whip was being used for the second time that day.

AT THE CLIFTONA

"Death Flies East," the Columbia mystery melodrama of murder on a speeding giant air liner shows Saturday at the Cliftona theatre.

Conrad Nagel and Florence Rice are featured in the principal roles, with Raymond Walburn and Irene Franklin in support. The story, by Philip Wylie, concerns the passengers aboard an eastbound plane, one of whom meets a violent death, another being seriously, but not fatally poisoned. Romance is also present, for Conrad Nagel, as a young professor en route to Washington with secret documents, meets and falls in love with the lovely Miss Rice, a fugitive from the California parole authorities.

The mystery plane is forced to land in Dallas with its tragic cargo, but Nagel, by an ingenious ruse, succeeds in trapping the real culprit before the police authorities take charge.

Others in the cast of "Death Flies East" are Purnell Pratt, Oscar Apfel, Robert Allen and Geneva Mitchell. Phil Rosen directed.

Stan Laurel and Oliver Hardy the two "Babes of Toyland" are an added attraction in their latest comedy sensation "The Live Ghost."

AT THE GRAND

That truth is stranger than fiction is a literary bromide to most people who have never had an opportunity to test the validity of the old saying.

There is one actress on the Warner Bros. lot, however, who knows just how true the dictum is. That actress is Joan Blondell, who has the stellar role in "Kansas City Princess," which comes to the Grand Theatre on Friday.

Despite the fact that she is only in her early twenties, this blonde, blue-eyed star has done as much globe-trotting as many a hardened and aged adventurer.

There have been few situations in any of her pictures which she couldn't top with some parallel out of a chapter in her own life.

GLAD DAY

Here's another day, dear
Here's the sun again
Peeping in his pleasant way
Through the window pane
Rise and let him in, dear,
Hail him "hip hurrah!"
Now the fun will all begin,
Here's another day.
Such a lot to do, dear,

Such a lot to see!
How we ever can get through
Fairly puzzles me.
Hurry up and out, dear,
Then—away! away!
In and out and roundabout,
Here's another day.

Editorial Of The Day

"HOGS IS HOGS"

(Washington C. H. Herald)
With hog prices right at ten dollars and choice beef cattle at near thirteen dollars, livestock raisers are in better condition financially—especially when we add to present market prices the amounts paid by the government, out of the proceeds of the processing tax, for one third as many hogs not raised as the farmers raised than for many years.

Conservatively inclined hog and cattle raisers, though, many of them, do not think so. They think that prices have gone high enough and should stop rising or recede a little. They are the livestock raisers who are able to take a long range view of economic conditions in general and the effect those general conditions will have on farm produce prices.

Unfortunately there are a great number of farmers and stock raisers who have been plunged so deeply into debt by the government's war time inflation of the currency and the subsequent deflation of the currency by greedy private interests, that they are unable to look beyond the pressing needs of the present and, naturally enough, would like to see hog and cattle prices advance to still higher levels.

We always worry about something, that seems to be our nature. We worry, some of us, because of the fear that prices will get so high to the consumer that demand will slump and bring a severe drop in prices. Others among us worry for fear prices will not hold up until they can see over the top of the mountain of debt confronting them, one can hear both worries. But ten dollar hogs here in Fayette-co should not worry any one.

The furlong, or 220 yards, originally meant the length of a furrow. It was supposed to be the distance oxen could plow without stopping to rest.

Club Foot May Be Corrected At Any Age, Says Physician

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

IT WOULD be cruel to attempt to describe the nature of club-foot for a lay audience, were it not for the fact that we can append to the description a promise that by modern methods of orthopedic treatment, the condition can be corrected, and the deformity completely obliterated.

This is true no matter at what age treatment is undertaken. There are, of course, many advantages in treating it as early as possible.

In a child at the age of about a year or 18 months, simple manipulation and fixation in casts will correct the condition, if the treatment is persisted in. In older people surgical procedures may be necessary, but even so, the results in competent hands are extremely good.

In the ordinary form of club-foot, the feet are bent so that the big toes are practically facing each other, and the soles of the feet face backwards. The condition is obvious at birth, but may not be noticed until the child begins to walk, when it is found that it walks upon the outside of the ankle.

Treatment should be begun before it begins to walk or immediately afterwards, because most of the deformity depends upon the formation of callouses and bursae on the places where the foot is in contact with the ground or floor in walking.

In this form of club-foot all the bones and soft structures of the foot are present, but are distorted in their relations to each other. The exact cause of the condition is not thoroughly understood. It is possibly due to contractions of the soft tissues from the child's position before birth. There is almost always considerable atrophy of the muscles of the foreleg, which suggests that some slight paralysis may have occurred before birth, possibly of an infectious nature, like infantile paralysis. The only treatment that is needed in these cases is to force the feet into a correct position, and hold them in place until the parts have settled into their new position. The outlook is excellent if treatment is instituted early.

The deformity may recur after treatment, but correction can be maintained. Recurrence is common from inefficient reduction and inefficient retention after reduction, and the general impression prevails that the correction of this deformity is impossible or difficult. Nothing could be further from the truth. The deformity can be corrected regardless of age, and in infancy the foot can be corrected without destruction of tissue, and normal function secured in every case.

Some atrophy of the calf and thigh muscles may persist throughout life, but this in no way interferes with the activity of the individual. Growth is not arrested and height is not appreciably affected. In middle or late childhood, or at any age after fixed changes in the bones have occurred, the foot can be made perfectly straight so that walking on the sole is permitted, but there is greater arrest of development, and appreciable deficiency in height is noted.

The most important lesson which parents, who bring children with this deformity into the world, have to learn is that it is no disgrace and no fault of their own, and that persistent treatment will always result in a completely satisfactory result. Early discouragements must be disregarded, and for the sake of the child's future happiness, repeated manipulation insisted upon.

CAKE MAKING DO'S AND DON'TS GIVEN IN MRS. THURN'S LETTER

Dear Friends in Circleville:
So many of you have asked me questions about various phases of cake making that, once more, I want to give in some detail the do's and don'ts for general cake procedure. Of course you who have good cook books and use them faithfully as reference books know these pointers. In addition to a quality cook book you should have a good range, one preferably with an oven control and which has a well insulated oven, so that the correct baking temperature may be set and kept the desired time.

But most important of all you must read directions and follow them accurately; a good recipe and a good range will not make a good cake unless you know how to use both correctly.

Some Things to Do

Read the recipe; get out the essential tools and utensils; get out the ingredients; measure the ingredients, checking with the recipe as you do each thing. Mix as directed; prepare pans as directed. Be sure the oven temperature is correct before putting the cake in the oven. Correct according to recipe, and if recipe does not state then correct for the type of cake.

Do not bake different kinds of cakes at the same time, for small and layer cakes call for hotter oven than a loaf cake. Place the cake on a lower grate of the oven, near the center. Do not open the oven door until the cake has had time to form; do not move pan when you open the oven; if browning too fast, lay a piece of paper over the cake; when done, the cake has shrunk from the sides of the pan and when pressed gently with a finger it springs back. Insert a straw or toothpick in the center of the loaf or layer and if it comes out clean it is done; this should be in accordance with the recipe directions for time also.

What's the Matter?

If the cake falls or is too heavy it may be due to too slow an oven, uneven temperature; moving of pan soon after baking starts; too much sugar; too much fat; too little flour.

If the cake is coarse grained it may be due to too much baking powder; too slow an oven; too little mixing.

If the cake cracks it may be because there is too much flour; too hot an oven.

If the cake puffs up in the middle or one side it may be due to a bad position in the oven; uneven heat of oven due to poor insulation or shifting of temperature due to turning up and down of heat; it may be due to too much flour.

Rough edges usually mean too much sugar; or poor mixing; too much fat; or too little flour.

If you have faithfully followed a recipe and still have poor results it may be that the recipe needs correcting which you can do with a little experimentation; or it may be the fault of the range.

Cake Baking Temperatures
Unless otherwise stated the following temperatures are correct for the different kinds of cakes:

Loaves, moderate oven, 350 to 400 degrees, for forty minutes; with fruit, 350 degrees, and the time depends on the thickness of the loaf; with molasses or chocolate, 350 degrees, and the time depends on the thickness; a rich fruit loaf, 350 degrees or low temperature, baked for one hour or more. Sponge Cake or Angel Cake, 320 degrees F., or slow oven, one hour. Layer Cake, 375 degrees, or moderate, for twenty minutes, unless otherwise specified by the recipe. Small cakes and cup cakes, 350 degrees to 400 degrees, or moderate oven, 25 minutes, unless otherwise specified.

Cookies, 450 degrees, hot oven, six to eight minutes; with chocolate or molasses or much fruit, 375 degrees, or moderate, fifteen to eighteen minutes.

Drop Cookies, 425 degrees, moderate oven, twelve minutes.

Wafers, 400 degrees, or moderate, ten minutes.

Macaroons, 300 degrees, slow, for twenty minutes.

My Favorite Spice Cake

This is a recipe which will always give a good cake, suitable for the lunch box or tea table, or for dessert at luncheon or dinner.

One and seven eighths cup flour; one cup sugar; one half cup shortening; two eggs; two teaspoons cinnamon; one cup sour milk or cream; one fourth teaspoon salt; one half teaspoon ground cloves; one and seven eighths teaspoons baking powder; one half teaspoon soda; two thirds cup seedless raisins or currants.

Blend the shortening and sugar thoroughly, adding the well beaten eggs; then sift all the dry ingredients with flour twice, add alternately with milk or cream to the first mixture. When well mixed add the raisins or currants dredge with a little flour. Bake in layers in a moderate oven, 375 degrees, about twenty minutes. Ice with boiled icing, thickly.

Dishes Designed For Lenten Menus; Fish and Sea Food

During the weeks preceding Easter many of us prefer to eliminate meat from the dietary and in its place to use fish, eggs, fowl and an increased amount of vegetables. With the latter if fish and eggs are omitted, cheese should be plentiful, or nuts, to keep up to the essential protein of the customary diet. These fish and sea foods recipes are simple, they may be made with canned fish if there is no fresh fish available in your community, and in combination with such cereals as macaroni and rice they make nourishing, well balanced meals.

Baked with Spaghetti

One cup cooked or canned fish, flaked; one and one half cups milk; three cups cooked spaghetti; one teaspoon salt; two tablespoons butter; one half teaspoon pepper; one half green pepper chopped; one half cup bread crumbs.

Melt one tablespoon butter in the baking dish, cover with half the crumbs, then with alternate layers of spaghetti, fish, green pepper and seasoning, until all are used. Add the milk sprinkle with the remainder of the bread crumbs and dot with butter. Bake twelve minutes in a hot oven, 400 degrees F. Serves eight.

Fish Chowder

Two pounds fish; one fourth pound salt pork; two tablespoons minced onions; one quart water; one pint hot milk; three cups diced potatoes; salt and pepper.

Simmer the fish in the water. Cook the potatoes in the fish stock, until tender, remove and flake. Cook onion in the pork fryings until tender. Remove the pork and onions. Combine fish, pork fryings, potatoes, stock and seasonings. Boil, add hot milk. Serves six.

Fish Creole

Two cups cooked or canned fish or sea food; two cups minced onion; two cups minced green peppers; one quart stewed tomatoes; two tablespoons butter; one eighth teaspoon paprika; one clove or garlic, chopped; salt and pepper.

Melt the butter, add paprika and stir until blended. Add onion, green pepper and garlic and simmer until tender. Then add tomatoes, salt and pepper. Boil five minutes. Then place the fish or sea foods, canned or cooked (such as shrimps, crab meat, clam) in this sauce and boil for ten minutes. Serve hot. Enough for eight.

Fish Pie

Two cups cooked or canned fish or sea food; one cup white sauce; two cups mashed potatoes; two tablespoons minced green pepper; sage; salt.

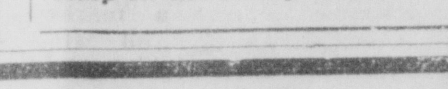

Mix fish, green pepper, seasonings and sauce together. Place in a casserole, cover with mashed potatoes.

person to be served. Buy mutton instead of lamb, and select a piece from the undercut. Cut squares about one-and-one half inches wide, and about one half inch thick. Dip each in good olive oil; place the pieces, six to eight, on the skewer with a bay leaf between each two. Place on the broiler and grill until tenderly brown on all sides. Serve piping hot, each person pulls the kebabs from the skewer with his fork.

Turkish Kebabs

Two large onions cut thin; two large apples peeled and cored and sliced; eight slices lean bacon; eight pieces thin mutton about the size of the bacon. Lay all together in the bottom of a baking dish; sprinkle with about half a teaspoon to one teaspoon of curry powder and the same amount of ground ginger; half a teaspoon of salt. Let stand for two hours. String on skewers in this order: meat, onion, bacon, apple, then meat and repeat. Wrap the skewers separately in parchment paper rubbed well with butter, lay on a baking pan or casserole, and bake in the moderate hot oven, 350 degrees F., one and one half hours. Slip the papers off, finish browning a few minutes, then slip off the skewers and surround with a border of freshly cooked rice.

VARSITY, ALUMNI TO MEET

LINEUP THAT WON HONORS 1931 INTACT

Contest to Follow Two Class Games One of Which Is For Title

Basketball as it was played in 1931 and as it is played today will be shown at the high school this evening when the alumni, comprised entirely of the team that won the championship of the Central Buckeye league four years ago, meets the high school varsity.

The game will start about 8:15. The lineups of the two principals will be:

High School	Alumni
Kirwin	F. Purcell
Grant	D. White
Styers	C. W. Hegele
Jenkins	G. Stout
Speakman	G. M. Davis

The referee will be Johnny Heiskell.

Griffith will probably see a lot of service at the tip-off position for the varsity with Ned Thacher, sixth member of the title team, to get some action for the alumni. Billy Steele will also be a member of the alumni squad.

The first game, that for the intramural championship between sophomore and junior girls, will start at 7 o'clock with a game between sophomore and senior boys booked next.

A good crowd is expected to see the games.

WESLEYAN RELAYS TO BE APRIL 27

DELAWARE, March 8 — The fourth annual Ohio Wesleyan High School Relays will be staged on Selby field here Saturday, April 27, George Gauthier, manager of the meet, announced today.

This year's meet, according to Gauthier, is expected to draw an entry list of approximately 1,000 boys. Almost 900 participated last year, when Toledo Scott won the class A title and New London took the class B event.

The Ohio Wesleyan Relays are unique in that every event is a team affair. Three boys compete in each of the six field events and our comprise a team in each of the six running races. The relays were first started in 1932.

TROSKY IMPROVES

NEW ORLEANS, March 8 — Yesterday's practice session of the Cleveland Indians on a field ankle deep in mud today brought out one satisfactory fact—that Hal Trosky is a much improved first baseman.

He credited his improvement around the sack to a winter spent "in thinking over" his fielding faults of last season. During the first batting session of the year, Earl Averill hit a long home run over the right field wall.

Threw Away Riches

SWAMPSCOTT, Mass. — The odor was very, very foul. So Mrs. Den Griss threw the lump of substance she found on the beach near her home in a dump. When she learned it was pure ambergris from a sperm whale, and worth $35 an ounce to makers of perfumes, she requested the selectmen to comb the dump. She estimated the lump was worth about $15,000.

About This And That

BY THE SECOND GUESSER

Ashville to Banquet

Ashville's basketball fans remain undaunted—They are going to have a big basketball banquet next Thursday to celebrate a fine season, blotted only by the boys' defeat at the hands of New Holland in the tournament. Special tribute will be paid to the girls who have won much distinction under Coach Stella Morrison.

The annual banquet of the Pickaway-co Farmers and Sportsman's association will be held next Thursday and plans are going forward for a big attendance.

Record Good One

The record of the organization in this county is a real one—it has been co-operating with the division of conservation and has received the following allotment of fish and game distributed in 1934 and up to date in 1935: 400 pheasants, 251 rabbits, seven raccoons, 750 channel cat fish, 140 black bass, 250 rock bass, 800 crappies, 10,000 rock bass fingerlengths, 1,500 black bass fingerlengths, 8,000 blue gills fingerlengths—the total number of matured and fingerlength fish distributed in streams of the county was 21,440.

Sportsmen urge all hunters and fishers to obtain their licenses from members of the sportsman's association. H. E. Betz, Pettit Tire shop and Barrere-Nickerson hardware as all proceeds go to propagation of fish and game.

Harry Bortholomew, secretary of the organization, has not yet announced the speaker for the big feed—Another good program will be provided.

SPEED RACER MAY TRY FOR NEW RECORD

Campbell Uncertain of Plans; May Await More Favorable Beach

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla., Mar. 8.—Sir Malcolm Campbell, English speed merchant who cracked world's land speed record yesterday was undecided today whether he will ship his Bluebird super racer back to England or await a more favorable beach and try for a higher speed.

"I am satisfied the Bluebird has much more speed than I have attained," he said. "The whole question hinges on whether the beach will improve or get worse with passing time. I am advised it should be better at high tide during full moon about 18th but I am undecided what to do."

Sir Malcolm had the closest call of his racing career he disclosed following his record run.

"As I was entering the measured mile on the north run the car hit a bump and for another mile I was all over the beach and barely missed running into the dunes," said Sir Malcolm. "My tires were ripped to pieces and it is miraculous that they held together."

Visibility Poor

"The course was fairly good but I picked up a mist on my windshield which made visibility poor at times. The run as a whole however, was not bad and I am glad that I have at last been able to break the record of two years ago."

"I suffered an injured wrist shortly after starting while changing gears. This is a harder feat than one might think at such speed. It really however, is just an old sprain. Other than being shaken up I suffered no ill effects from the run."

Sir Malcolm really broke four different records in his super racer, including a new world's land speed record.

They are: one mile, miles per hour 276.816 the time 13.005; kilo, 281.374 miles per hour; time 8:10; five mile, mph 235.141 the time 1:11.60; five kilo, miles per hour 268.474. All miles are average.

LOUIS TOO YOUNG TO BATTLE BAER, REFEREE DECLARES

SAN FRANCISCO, March 8.—Joe Louis, the sensational negro boxer from Detroit, is too young to fight Max Baer.

Authority for that statement is Lt. Col. Commander Jesse Kenworthy, U. S. N., noted ring expert. Kenworthy refereed the fight in Los Angeles two weeks ago when Louis knocked out Lee Rapage, the San Diego heavyweight.

"Louis is only 20 years old and that is too young for him to prepare for a championship fight," Kenworthy said. "If I was his manager, I wouldn't let him go after the title until he is 24 years old."

Tonight Donald ("Red") Barry, of the Washington, D. C., battler, meets Louis in a ten-round bout.

Louis, who has won fifteen straight battles—thirteen of them by knockouts—since entering the professional fight game, is confident he will add Barry's name to his list of victims.

Among the interested spectators tonight will be Max Baer himself. Ring followers declare the champion is making a "scouting trip," being fully aware he may some day defend his crown against the Detroit dusky demon.

KENDALL MAY NEAR TOP IN PURE OIL CO.

Is Superintendent of Midland Refinery; Climb Recounted In Magazine

EDITOR'S NOTE: Kendall B. May, son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles H. May, S. Court-st., has been making rapid strides to the front rank as an employee of the Pure Oil Co. In a recent issue of the "Pure Oil News", publication of the company, his picture was printed on the front cover with a complete story of his activities with the company found on an inside page. The story follows:

Kendall B. May was appointed superintendent of Midland Refinery Sept. 1, 1933. Previous to this he had held positions of varying capacities since starting with the Pure Oil Company in the summer of 1922. This was just after graduating from Circleville High school, and his first position was in the Stock Transfer Department at Columbus Office. At the end of this summer he matriculated at Wooster College, Wooster, O. After two years study, he transferred to Ohio State University and continued his studies in chemical engineering. However, his summer vacation of 1924 found him working again, this time in the laboratory of Heath Refinery.

In the summer of 1925 he started work at the old Complanter Refinery and advanced from one position to another until by January, 1927, he had acquired operating experience in all departments. It was at this time that Complanter Refinery was dismantled and his experience was such that he was one of the few selected to be on hand until all finished products had been shipped out. After this he was sent to Cabin Creek Refinery as assistant resident chemist. Meanwhile the Gyro cracking process had proved itself and the first units within the Pure Oil Company were constructed at Cabin Creek.

Sensing the opportunities this offered and also having the desired qualifications, he became one of the first operators of these particular units. Not long afterwards, in 1929 his abilities were rewarded by being appointed head gyro foreman, a position he held until August, 1932, when he was made assistant superintendent of Midland Refinery.

Slightly more than a year later, in September, 1933, he became superintendent.

To say that he is popular with his personnel is putting it mildly. At the same time he has the faculty of combining this popularity with an unrelenting demand that each employee discharge his given duties as instructed. Perhaps this last mentioned quality might serve as ample reason for his remarkable rise.

He was born in Circleville, Ohio, April 2, 1904, is happily married and the proud father of a sixteen months old son, Richard Bennett May. Mrs. May until Aug. 6, 1929, was Miss Ethel McIntosh of Warren, Pa.

tory salaries if the legislature insists.

Governor Davey asked the legislature for more than twice the sum for the executive offices that Governor White spent during his second term. White got $72,471 for the last two years, Davey requested $145,680.

Executive office salaries cost Ohio an average of $29,444 a year under White, Davey asked for $53,040; White spent $440 for office supplies in 1934, Davey wanted $2,400 for 1935 and a like sum for 1936; postage the last year of the White administration cost $1,793, Davey estimated he would require $4,000; communication White's last year cost $1,907, Davey wanted $5,000 annually.

According to Governor Davey's own figures it will cost $26,018 more for office maintenance alone during his two years in office than his predecessor found it necessary to spend.

He requested $27,651 to run the executive mansion for two years, as compared with an expenditure of $19,146 by former Governor White for a corresponding period.

In an explanatory statement accompanying the budget the governor called attention to the $8,700,000 increase over the appropriation for the previous biennium, but failed to mention the increased outlay for the executive office and mansion.

Bevis recalled that the appropriation bill for the preceding biennium contained no specific sum for state aid to weak school districts; however, the cigarette tax for 1933-34 was used for this purpose. The cigarette tax for 1935 already is encumbered to retire notes issued by board of education in state aid school districts for 1934 obligations.

None From Sales Tax

It must be borne in mind that none of the foregoing appropriations are to be made against receipts from the new retail sales tax, which is estimated to yield $60,000,000 a year. Except a small fraction for administrative purposes, the state appropriates none of this for its own use, but distributes it all among schools, local governments, old age pensions and poor relief.

Davey recommended an increase of $74,920 for the state utilities commission, but this was $121,333 short of the sum asked by Chairman E. J. Hoppie for the next two years. Hoppie has asked for $150,000 in addition to the normal appropriation so that engineers and accountants might be employed to speed up action on rate appeals.

The legislature was asked to appropriate $2,688,719 for the state tax commission and eight of its sub-divisions, or $499,280 more than was spent on the same units during the preceding two years. The $2,688,719 does not include the cost of administering the retail sales tax, for which $625,000 already has been appropriated to cover only the first six months of 1935.

Attorney General Bricker was allowed an increase of $27,435 for the next two years, his department being budgeted for $307,990. Secretary of State Myers was listed for an increase of $4,239, or a total of $174,814; State Auditor Tracy for an increase of $19,595, or a total of $19,595, and Treasurer Day for an increase of $35,006, or a total of $168,280.

Britain Seeking American Assistance to Thwart Japan's Designs on China

WASHINGTON—Behind the quiet one-hour conference between British Ambassador Sir Ronald Phillips and Acting Secretary Phillips were some of the most important developments in the foreign policy of the Roosevelt Administration.

It explained a lot of things, among them the recent break with Russia, the tremendous naval program, American aloofness in the Pacific.

What the British Ambassador wanted to know was whether the United States would join Great Britain and other Powers in extending financial aid to China, to head off Japan's taking a stranglehold mortgage on the country. The Ambassador had given Phillips an advance indication regarding his proposition, and Phillips had discussed the question at the White House. What he said, therefore, came direct from the President.

His answer was a definite "No." Sir Ronald countered by pointing out that China was suffering because of the Roosevelt policy of raising the price of silver. He also emphasized that what was much more important, that a Japanese loan to China meant that Japan would swallow up China.

Phillips, in effect, replied: "China is too big to be swallowed. Japan will find herself throwing money into a bag without a bottom."

Nagging the British

The nature of Sir Ronald's visit was public property. But what most people did not realize was that it was a tremendous victory for Roosevelt diplomacy. For nearly two years Henry L. Stimson had been nagging at the British, trying to secure from them a common Anglo-American policy in the Far East. During that time the British, despite a huge economic stake in China, sat complacently on the sidelines. They enjoyed watching their chestnuts being pulled out of the fire by the United States.

Roosevelt reversed all that. He remained aloof in the Orient. Now the British are nagging at the State Department in the same way Stimson used to nag at them. Roosevelt policy in the Far East now can be summarized as follows:

1. Build up a gigantic Navy. To accomplish this Roosevelt completely disregarded his own stipulation that Public Works should create employment. Instead, large hunks of PWA money were set aside for warships which—two years later—are not beyond the blueprint stage and have not employed a single workman.

2. Avoid all understandings with foreign countries, even indirectly.

(This was behind the recent debt break with Russia.)

3. Forget the Philippines if necessary in order to keep out of trouble in the Orient.

Anglo-American Alliance?

Of these, the policy which has come in for most secret discussion lately is that regarding understandings with foreign countries.

The State Department leans toward such understandings in a mild way. The Navy does not. Secretary Hull has made it apparent that American sympathies in the Far East are with the British. One of his chief advisers believe that the affinity between the Dominions and the United States, the distrust which Australia and Canada have of Japan, makes the English-speaking peoples natural allies.

With this the General Board of the Navy emphatically disagrees. In fact, some Admirals have been much provoked that Admiral Standley, Chief of Naval Operations, and head sea-dog of the Navy, cooperated so closely with the British.

AKRON LAWYER PAYS PENALTY FOR POISONING

Shank Goes Calmly to Electric Chair in Little Rock Prison

SLEW 4 IN FAMILY

Wife Collapses at News of Execution

LITTLE ROCK, Ark., Mar. 8.—Mark Shank, picnic poisoner of four members of the Alvin Colley family, died in the electric chair at Tucker prison farm today at 7:14 a. m.

Shank walked to the chair calmly and indifferently refused to make any final statement. About fifty persons watched the execution.

Mrs. Geraldine Shank, the convicted man's wife, was unable to be present when her husband went to his death. Governor Futrell had promised to hold up the execution until she could reach Arkansas, if she desired, to visit the condemned man once more, but she refused when the governor said he would offer no hope of executive clemency.

Shank who was 43 years old and a lawyer from Akron, Ohio, poisoned Colley, his wife and two sons at a picnic on August 15, 1933.

Pleaded Insanity

Shank was captured by Little Rock, Ark., police who happened along just as Colley collapsed at the wheel of his automobile after having drunk poisoned fruit juice. The lawyer confessed to poisoning the family, but pleaded insanity. He was convicted in 1933, but was granted four stays of execution before a new date was set for his death.

KENT, March 8.—Unable to go to her husband to spend the last hours before death with him, Mrs. Geraldine Shank collapsed here today when informed that Mark Shank had been executed for the "poison picnic" murders of the Alvin Colley family in Arkansas.

Mrs. Shank was brought to a private home here from Akron last night and immediately placed under the care of two nurses. Physicians would permit no one to see or talk with the stricken woman, but her attorney, Blake Cook, said she had collapsed and was in a serious condition.

MEDINA, March 8.—On a farm at Creston, a few miles from Medina, five-year-old Clyde Colley, the sole survivor of the Arkansas "poison picnic," played today, blissfully ignorant of the execution of Mark Shank.

MANSFIELD, March 8.—The largest set of twins born in Mansfield in many years was thriving today at the home of Mr. and Mrs. George Reece. The twins together weighed 15½ pounds, a boy tipping the scales at eight pounds and a girl at seven and one-half pounds.

Physicians say the usual weight for twins are between four and six pounds each.

HOGS CLIMB TOWARD $10

$9.80 Paid by Co-operative; Thursday Sale Grosses $19,339.40

The price offered for hogs climbed a little nearer the $10 mark, Thursday, at the sale of the Pickaway-co Livestock Co-operative association.

Hogs weighing 200-250 pounds were sold for $9.75 to $9.80. If the trend continues upward it is possible $10 will be offered within the next week or two.

Five hundred and fifty hogs were offered on the market. The total run of all stock was 785.

The sale was one of the best conducted by the association the total amount of business transacted amounting to $19,339.40, according to Harry J. Briggs, manager.

Packers in metropolitan cities are engaging in a new practice in order to obtain the best fat cattle obtainable. They are sending representatives directly to shipping centers. The Pickaway-co Livestock Co-operative association has sent five cars of cattle direct to Chicago packers in recent weeks.

Shortage of fat cattle in the drought area has resulted in the efforts of the packers.

HUEY'S TALK PLEASES HUEY

Attacks Roosevelt, Johnson, New Deal and About Everyone Else

WASHINGTON March 8.—Senator Huey P. Long admitted today he was "greatly pleased" with his blistering attack on President Roosevelt's New Deal made over the radio late last night in answer to Brig. Gen. Hugh S. Johnson's condemnation of him and the Rev. Charles E. Coughlin.

Johnson accused Long and Detroit's "radio priest" with preaching revolutionary policies that would lead the country to ruin and openly charged they were working together.

Instead of lashing out at the former recovery administrator Long concentrated his attack on the administration and exclaimed the New Deal "is more like the St. Vitus dance."

"God save us from two more years of the disaster we've had under that gang," Long shouted.

Long accused the White House of ordering Johnson to attack him and while he stood in front of the microphone delivering his oral attack he was surrounded by two bodyguards and 50 spectators about 25 of whom officials said were "Long's friends."

He referred to Johnson as "the late lamented the pampered crown prince... loaned by Wall Street to run the government." He also mentioned Mrs. Roosevelt as being among those who are running the government.

Hollywood Stunter

Dies in Copenhagen

COPENHAGEN, March 8.—One too many stunts today had resulted fatally for John Tramm, Hollywood dare-devil parachute jumper.

Tramm died of want of oxygen in a 28,000-foot ascent preparatory to an attempt to raise his own 17,500 feet delayed drop record.

Still climbing, his pilot noticed Tramm adjust his oxygen mask, then feebly signal for a descent. The pilot plunged rapidly to thicker atmosphere, but Tramm became unconscious, and an hour's effort to revive him failed.

MERCURY DOWN TO 30

The temperature dropped to the 30 degree mark Thursday night.

DAVEY BUDGET NINE MILLIONS ABOVE WHITE'S

Over 59 Millions Needed for Two Years, Governor Tells Solons

OFFICE COST HIGHER None of Money to Come From Sales Tax

COLUMBUS, Mar. 8.—Operation of the government of Ohio during the 1935-36 biennium will cost the taxpayers $59,212,558 on the basis of executive budget estimates released today by Governor Davey and Finance Director Bevis.

Budget recommendations actually amount to $51,659,487, or approximately $8,700,000 in excess of the appropriation for the 1933-34 biennium. The remaining seven and a half million is accounted for by over-hanging appropriations made by the last general assembly and by restoration of the state employee salary reductions.

In recommending the $51,659,487 biennial expenditure, the governor did not take into account restoration of the salary cuts which the tone of his transmittal message to the legislature indicated he still hopes to avoid.

Reduction Out of Picture

Decisively defeated in the Senate finance committee and reported to be no more highly esteemed in the lower house, the Davey salary reduction bill seems completely and permanently out of the picture. Realizing this, the finance director reserved three millions of anticipated revenue to pay status.

Cities of Northern Ohio Damaged by Sleet Storm

By International News Service

The most destructive sleet storm of the winter plunged two northern Ohio cities into darkness last night snapped wires, disrupted all travel, and made highways hazardous, resulting in serious injuries to at least five persons, a survey by International News Service revealed today.

Sandusky and Ashtabula returned to candles and kerosene lamps for a time as electric light wires snapped. Wires west of Sandusky were broken, while in Ashtabula the ice severed wires of the Cleveland Electric Illuminating Co., whose plant supplies the city.

Two Lorain nurses, returning to St. Joseph's hospital, were critically injured when the automobile in which they were riding skidded and crashed four miles west of Lorain early today. They were Ethel Starkey and Genevieve Reidy.

Police Lieutenant George Carson of Lorain, who was driving the nurses from Vermilion, received a broken collar bone and head injuries.

At Cleveland, Vernon Welsh, 22, was reported near death at Charity hospital from injuries received when his car skidded and collided with a heavy sedan, police said. Gladys Rowland, 17, riding with Welsh, received minor injuries.

Weatherman Ralph Mize, at Cleveland, predicted temperatures in the lower 20's with moderation expected by tonight. He said occasional sunshine today probably would melt the ice, which led officials at Cleveland airport to predict air travel would be resumed late today or tomorrow.

Education is Needed By Federal Judges

WASHINGTON March 8.—Striking back at federal court rulings against NRA, Donald Richberg, NRA coordinator, today declared "some federal judges need an education in economics."

Testifying before the senate finance committee conducting an investigation into the NRA, Richberg said that in some instances federal judges have "completely disregarded the facts."

LEAGUE ASSAILS DAVEY ACTIVITY

CLEVELAND, March 8.—Accusing the chief executive of "playing politics with human misery" in Ohio's relief crisis, the Citizens League of Cleveland today demanded that Governor Martin L. Davey halt his "raids on the merit system."

"No incident in public administration in Ohio in recent years has created more wide-spread resentment in this (Cuyahoga) and other populous counties than Governor Davey's raids on the merit system," the league charged in its weekly bulletin.

HISTORIAN PREDICTS 'TERRIBLE WARFARE'

NEW YORK, March 8.—H. G. Wells, the noted British author and historian, today declared that in the last eleven months the world has been heading for a "new and more horrible world war which will come by 1940."

Wells arrived here today from England and the first question asked him by reporters who met him in the liner Bremer was: "Does your prophecy of a year ago that there would be another World War still hold?"

The Englishman replied emphatically: "Yes. In the 11 months that have passed since I made that prophecy we have been heading toward a new and more horrible World War."

REPORT GREEK REBELS SEIZE TURKISH SHIP

Capture made as Reprisal for Stopping Vessels Carrying Stores

ITALY SENDS SHIPS

Three Nations Have Warships on Scene

LONDON, March 8.—The rebellious crew of the Greek armored cruiser Averoff, flagship of the insurgent forces in the Greek civil war, today seized the Turkish steamer Konya in the harbor of Mytilene, island of Lesbos, it was stated in a Central News dispatch from Istanbul.

The seizure was made in reprisal for Turkey's recent action in holding two Greek vessels suspected of conveying stores to the rebel warships.

ROME, March 8.—The third great nation to take protective measures in view of the civil war raging in Greece, Italy today dispatched three warships to Greek waters to guard Italian interests in the Aegean.

Premier Mussolini sent the cruiser Trentino and the destroyers Damosto and Pigafetta to the scene of action. Great Britain and France previously had dispatched warships to Greek waters.

Guard Subjects

The vessels will proceed to the Dodecanese islands and stand by in case of danger to Italian subjects. Population of the islands is predominantly Greek.

ATHENS, Mar. 8.—Rebel infantry fought bitterly today in spite of zero weather to push a path through the government lines on the Thracian front and regain Salonika, now regarded as the key to the rebellion, according to meager dispatches received here.

While the government insisted that only the weather prevented an immediate movement that would annihilate the rebels, other reports indicated that the loyal troops had suffered one or two reverses.

It was confirmed officially today that rebel warships had occupied three Aegean islands yesterday, thus placing the forces of former Premier Eleutherios Venizelos in control of Crete, and Samos, Chios and Lesbos off the coast of Asiatic Turkey.

Venizelos was reported ready to proclaim an independent republic on Crete if the rest of the revolt collapsed.

A British warship and one of three French ships have arrived at Phaleron to protect their nationals.

WIDOW, 81, OF ONCE RICH MAN FREEZES

DENVER, March 8.—"Baby Doe" Tabor, 81-year-old widow of the late United States Senator H. A. W. Tabor, Colorado silver king, will be buried beside the man she married when he had $11,000,000 and remained with him through poverty and privation according to plans laid here today.

Mrs. Tabor, whose frozen body was found in her shack beside the Matchless mine on Fryer hill far above the city of Leadville, will be brought to Denver.

Tabor and "Baby Doe" were married in Washington, D. C., with President Chester A. Arthur, cabinet members and senators, present.

The Tabor fortune, estimated at $11,000,000 at the time of his marriage to "Baby Doe," was acquired in a series of amazing silver strikes in the Leadville field. Collapse of the silver market in 1893 plunged Tabor into comparative poverty.

DISTANT UTOPIA

DR. TOWNSEND, the author of the widely-heralded plan for the relief of poverty and the circulation of money, has experienced difficulty in meeting the rather practical questions raised by the senate finance committee. In consequence it is improbable that we will leap from the worst depression in history into the millennium.

Nevertheless, he is confident that his scheme will work and that a $200-a-month pension to every person over sixty, including, presumably, John D. Rockefeller, Andrew Mellon, Henry Ford and others in somewhat similar financial circumstances, will lead us finally to the frontiers of Utopia.

Asked how an elderly couple, for example, would, in meeting the requirements of the plan, spend $4,800 a year, Dr. Townsend responded: "Buy a car, rebuild their home, refurnish it, buy some books, get things for their children."

That would suffice for the first year, but the mind of the author of the scheme was not sufficiently fertile to devise a spending program for the second, third and successive years, nor was he able, confronted with the arithmetical problem of financing the plan, caring for ten million or more aged persons at an annual cost of $24,000,000,000 a year, to point the way to fulfillment.

So, it seems, we are back at the starting point and Utopia is not just around the corner, mess, of course, Huey Long succeeds in dividing the country's wealth so that every deserving family would have at least $5,000 free of debt.

A TYPE OF BLACKMAIL

THE GROWING tendency among legislatures throughout the country to control the racket involved in breach of promise litigation is a wholesome sign which calls for public approbation. These suits often represent a more or less genteel form of blackmail and in far too many instances they have succeeded in the accomplishment of their purpose.

In Illinois, a judge and two legislative leaders have drawn measures intended to correct weaknesses in law and procedure dealing with marriage and divorce which encourage alienation and breach of promise suits. Ohio and Indiana are working toward the same end, while the Bar Association of New York proposes changes in the law to restrict damages in breach of promise actions to expenses paid or incurred in contemplation of marriage.

Women who resort to the heart-balm shakedown are of a recognizable type. For the prospect of reaping easy-profits, they make a great show of their broken hearts and blighted hopes and, in doing so, forfeit their personal pride and self-respect for cash considerations. It is encouraging to know that the law at last has gotten around to the task of doing something about this situation.

SUPERIOR PEOPLE

THE FILIPINOS, in the opinion of Governor General Frank Murphy, who is home for a brief visit after nearly two years in the islands, are a superior race. In support of this conclusion he offers what seems to be the most convincing sort of evidence.

During his two years in the Philippines, Mr. Murphy says, the government's expenditures have been less than its income and there have been no increases in taxes. Their experiments in government under the provisional form of rule given them by this country show their astuteness in politics and he anticipates success if they are given executive as well as legislative power.

If the Filipinos are actually living within their income and avoiding the necessity of increasing taxes their status as a superior people hardly can be questioned. They should not only be given full authority to administer their own government but they might even be given some kind of a protectorate over ours.

A Harvard professor finds that the sun's light is hotter in Winter than in Summer. Coming from a Harvard professor, the opinion automatically falls under suspicion. He just wants to be different.

Looking Back In Pickaway County

FIVE YEARS AGO

Five Circleville places and three railroad shops were entered by robbers. Only a small amount of loot was taken.

A rainfall of 1.65 inches was reported by Dr. H. R. Clarke, local weather observer. The Scioto river raised six feet and two inches, reaching a stage of seven feet, four inches.

A traffic light was installed at the intersection of Washington and Main-sts.

15 YEARS AGO

Circleville high school boys defeated Ashville 23-13, and the girls won from Lancaster. The lineup of the boys' team included Burgett, Renick, Warner, Short and Williams.

A committee of the local American Legion post viewed a rehearsal of "Some Baby," latest production of the Camp Sherman Players, at Chillicothe, and contracted for two performances here.

Dr. D. V. Courtwright, chairman, and C. F. Lowe, reported at a dinner held at parish house that more than half of Pickaway-co's quota of $1,000 for the Boy Scout fund had been subscribed. Several $100 subscriptions were received.

A Thought for Today

GYPSY GIRL

THE STORY OF AN IMPASSIONED ROMANCE

McDONALD READER

READ THIS FIRST:

Consuelo, a beautiful gypsy girl, longs to dance with all the world at her feet. In love with her are Marcu, a deal maker, and Anica, both members of her tribe. She has only hate for her mother, Anica, but is extremely fond of her father, Girtza. The latter reprimands Anica for her treatment of Consuelo.

(NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY)

CHAPTER 3

A DILAPIDATED old hamper, pushed in one corner out of the way, was dragged forth and opened. Consuelo searched through it, pulling forth tawdry clothing, discarded trinkets and scraps of brilliant silk that had been saved for some possible use. In the bottom of the hamper was a package, the paper soiled and old. She picked it out and then tossed the other things back. With eager hands she undid the package and stared at the lovely article it held. For a moment she knelt motionless, then her fingers caressed the folds with tender awe. A forbidden garment, her mother's wedding skirt. It had been the best silk that money could buy and through the years its brilliant colors had never faded or spoiled. Five yards of loveliness, gathered and caught in by the belt.

She drew the silk thing up in her arms and held it to her and the feel of the silk against her arms was good.

She was very beautiful as she knelt there, her long hair falling about her to the floor like folds of rumpled black velvet, her eyes closed, the lashes making shadows on her cheeks. The loose blouse she wore had slipped from one shoulder exposing the full line of her throat. There was a quietude about her now that brought peace into her face, that stilled the animation but left there a radiant glow of satisfaction. So might she have looked after her death had she not so much as look upon the top of the high hill and her ideal had been fulfilled to the very utmost.

But only for a moment did the Madonna-like attitude exist, for in the next she was on her feet and with nimble fingers tore her own skirt from her and flung it to the floor. Off came the blouse which was replaced by a newer, more gaudy one. Then the beloved skirt was fastened about the slim waist.

More and more she added more bracelets, more beads; a gay scarf edged with bangs was knotted about her head leaving the dusty hair free. Into her ears went earrings, great gold loops that drew the lobes of her ears into pearl-like drops. She shook her head and the earrings and the bangs and the beads touched and made a tinkling music that joined the chorus of bracelets and anklets.

Digging among her things she produced a small bottle of eau de cologne and poured the liquid down her neck, disregarding the wet spots that oozed through on the blouse. She closed her eyes in ecstasy and inhaled deep of the heady scent. She hid the bottle again and placed the broken mirror on a box and thoughtfully viewed herself.

She turned this way and that, lips puckered. Her girdle of bright stripes was adjusted; the wrinkles of the skirt were flattened out; a curl was dampened and patted on her forehead. Now she turned again and very slowly began to smile and the smile said, "I'm beautiful!" Satisfied, she whirled around on her toes, arms flung out. The jingle of the ornaments was music in her ears.

"I'm happy," she murmured to herself. "Oh, but I'm happy!" She laughed aloud and began to half sing, half hum, improvising tune and words as she went along. "Only going to dance at Gorgio fair, I am, but that doesn't matter. There will be people and they will clap for me, throw dimes, maybe a half dollar or two and the young white chaps will flirt with me and I will flirt back at them and Marcu will be furious and scowl and threaten and I will laugh in his face and snap my fingers at him and I will pick some nice young man with money to buy me lemonade and ice cream and he will be afraid of me but afterwards he will boast to his friends that he treated the gypsy girl and tell how bad are the gypsies, how they carry knives in their belts and speak a language the gorgios don't understand and so the gorgios hate them—all but the gypsy girls and these they give bold looks and suspect bad things of. I am a bad gypsy girl but I am as beautiful as a spiky red carnation. Men love me but I hate them all. I'm as free as the wind and like the wind I dance! Dance! Dance!"

She whirled on her toes, the wedding skirt flying high about her bare legs. She flung back her head and laughed and laughed, like a drunken peasant. At that moment Anica drew aside the curtains. Her eyes took in the whirling laughing girl. At first the full significance of the outrage did not penetrate her mind, then she remembered. The silk skirt. Her wedding skirt! A cry of rage fell from her lips.

"What are you doing with that on?" The laughter stopped. The whirl stopped, but the skirt went on merrily winding itself around the legs. She shrieked, still not quite comprehending the situation. "Yes? I thought so, my mother." Bravado. Towardly she was shaking.

"What have you got it on for?" The girl going to dance in it this afternoon. She moved toward the end of the van. Anica gasped. "I guess you are not!" She stepped in front of the van's only exit.

"Why not?" demanded Consuelo, trying to pass her. "Because it's mine!" She caught the girl by the shoulders and shoved her against the wall. "You'll wear it, thief!"

"Oh yes, I will. Let go of me—you're hurting!"

The grip tightened. Inch by inch Anica forced her down against a pile of old rags. "Take it off!" she commanded. "I won't! Let go of me! What are you trying to do, anyway?" "I'm not trying to do anything—I'm doing it!" she retorted. Her hand gripped the whip from the rack. She poised over the girl who held high, face red and ugly.

"Now take it off!" "I won't! Get out of my way!" Consuelo shouted.

For answer the whip cracked across the shoulders and back of the girl. Consuelo screamed.

Again the whip fell. Heads of sweat dropped from the woman's face.

The girl was not screaming now but lay half stunned from surprise and pain. Red, ugly welts rose, the blood showing through the skin. Again the whip fell. Then frenzied, senses reeling, she sprang for her mother, grabbed her around the hips and the two rolled to the dusty floor of the van. Like a tigress the girl struggled on top, her slim fingers clutching the oily black hair.

The woman dropped the whip and together they grappled and rolled on the floor. Anica grabbed the skirt and her fingers tore at the belt until the fastenings gave way. The skirt tumbled in the struggling legs. Like animals the two screamed at each other, tussling, rolling, fingernails drawing blood.

There was a shriek from Anica as a stream of blood rolled down her cheek. She loosened her clutch from the skirt and, screaming like a mad woman, grasped the girl's throat.

"Kill you now!" she cried. The curtains of the van were thrust apart and Marcu sprang at the two. He pulled Anica from the girl and flung her against the wall. "In the name of God what are you doing, old fool?"

The woman, all panting and bleeding, the breath half knocked from her. "Get out of here!" she gasped. "Let me kill her now!" Again she sprang for the inert girl.

Marcu's foot stopped her and she sank groaning to the floor. He picked Consuelo up in his arms. There was a strange pallor under his tawny skin. He carried her from the van to a nearby bucket of water. "Come here, some of you!" he shouted, voice hoarse.

He threw water in the girl's face. She groaned and, gasping, began to draw the breath back into her lungs. Girtza was the first one of the quiet circle to move. His face was old and grim as he started for the van.

A few moments later the screams of a woman told that the long neglected whip was being used for the second time that day.

FISH ARE BITING

It's time now to overhaul the fishing tackle and incidental equipment. One of these days you'll be getting the fever, and there's nothing that will quiet your nerves until you drop a line into the water. That's what old fishermen tell me.

They are biting now over in Paint creek. Dr. L. R. Thorpe, a Greenfield dentist, landed a bass this week that weighed a little over two pounds, and other fishermen are trying their luck in Paint, Darby, and other creeks, and in the old Scioto, with varying degrees of success. "Doc's" prize bass last season weighed six pounds and six ounces.

The liars' club has already organized for the season, and we may look for some whoopers before long.

READY FOR BASEBALL

And another sure sign that spring is just around the corner is the preparations being made for the opening of the baseball season. The first activity along this line in Pickaway-co is over at New Holland where the players of that community having been summoned for a conference at the Rathskeller last Monday night.

Mike Helfrich, club sponsor of last season, is extending the invitation. He played a winning team on the diamond last season and he expects to have one of the best semi-pro teams in south-central Ohio this year. Mike is a good scout and a good sportsman, and if he sponsors a baseball team it will have to be a good one or he will quit 'em cold. I used to buy beef steak from Mike when he operated a market over in Greenfield, and Mike wasn't satisfied with ordinary good stuff—it had to be the best, for his customers. Here's to your old ball team, Mike.

ANOTHER MEAN MAN

I've discovered another "meanest man" over near Clarkburg. A sneak thief visited the farm of Lemuel Bowdye and apparently carried off quite a quantity of corn from a crib. Not satisfied with being just an ordinary thief, he opened a gate and permitted livestock from an adjoining field to have access to the open crib. Five horses became foudered when they ate too much corn and drank heavily from the water tank.

You may figure out your own type of punishment that should be meted out to this guy, without any suggestions from me.

THEATRES

"Death Flies East," the Columbia mystery melodrama of murder on a speeding giant air liner shows Saturday at the Cliftona theatre.

Conrad Nagel and Florence Rice are featured in the principal roles, with Raymond Walburn and Irene Franklin in support. The story, by Philip Wylie, concerns the passengers aboard an eastbound plane, one of whom meets a violent death, another being seriously, but not fatally, poisoned. Romance is also present, for Conrad Nagel, as a young professor en route to Washington with secret documents, meets and falls in love with the lovely Miss Rice, a fugitive from the California parole authorities.

The mystery plane is forced to land in Dallas with its tragic cargo, but Nagel, by an ingenious ruse, succeeds in trapping the real culprit before the police authorities take charge.

Others in the cast of "Death Flies East" are Purnell Pratt, Oscar Apfel, Robert Allen and Genevieve Mitchell. Phil Rosen directed.

Stan Laurel and Oliver Hardy the two "Babes of Toyland" are an added attraction in their latest comedy sensation "The Live Ghost."

AT THE GRAND

That truth is stranger than fiction is a literary bromide to most people who have never had an opportunity to test the validity of the old saying.

There is one actress on the Warner Bros. lot, however, who knows just how true the dictum is. That actress is Joan Blondell, who has the stellar role in "Kansas City Princess," which comes to the Grand Theatre on Friday.

Despite the fact that she is only in her early twenties, this blonde, blue-eyed star has done as much globe-trotting as many a hardened and aged adventurer.

There have been few situations in any of her pictures which she couldn't top with some parallel out of a chapter in her own life.

GLAD DAY

Here's another day, dear
Here's the sun again
Pepping in his pleasant way
Through the window pane
Rise and let him in dear,
Hail him "hip huray!"
Now the fun will all begin,
Here's another day,
Such a lot to do, dear,

Such a lot to see!
How we ever can get through
Fairly puzzles me.
Hurry up and out, dear,
Then—away! away!
In and out and roundabout.
Here's another day,

Editorial Of The Day

"HOGS IS HOGS"

(Washington C. H. Herald)

With hog prices right at ten dollars and choice beef cattle at near thirteen dollars, livestock raisers are in better condition financially—especially when we add to present market prices the amounts paid by the government out of the proceeds of the processing tax, for one third as many hogs not raised as the farmers raised than for many years.

Conservatively inclined hog and cattle raisers, though, many of them, do not think so. They think that prices have gone high enough and should stop rising or recede a little. They are the livestock raisers who are able to take a long range view of economic conditions in general and the effect those general conditions will have on farm produce prices.

Unfortunately there are a great number of farmers and stock raisers who have been plunged so deeply into debt by the government's war time inflation of the currency and the subsequent deflation of the currency by greedy private interests, that they are unable to look beyond the pressing needs of the present and, naturally enough, would like to see hog and cattle prices advance to still higher levels.

We always worry about something, that seems to be our nature. We worry, some of us, because of the fear that prices will get so high to the consumer that demand will slump and bring a severe drop in prices. Others among us worry for fear prices will not hold up until they can see over the top of the mountain of debt confronting them, one can hear both worries. But ten dollar hogs here in Fayette-co should not worry any one.

The furlong, or 220 yards, originally meant the length of a furrow. It was supposed to be the distance oxen could plow without stopping to rest.

Club Foot May Be Corrected At Any Age, Says Physician

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

IT WOULD be cruel to attempt to describe the nature of club-foot for a lay audience, were it not for the fact that we can append to the description a promise that by modern methods of orthopedic treatment the condition can be corrected, and the deformity completely obliterated.

This is true no matter at what age the treatment is undertaken. There are, of course, many advantages in treating it as early as possible. In a child the foot is in a condition that is under taken. There are, of course, many advantages in treating it as early as possible. In a child the foot is in a condition that is under taken. There are, of course, many advantages in treating it as early as possible. In a child the foot is in a condition that is under taken.

Some atrophy of the calf and thigh muscles may persist throughout life, but this in no way interferes with the activity of the individual. Growth is not arrested and height is not appreciably affected. In middle or late childhood, or at any age after fixed changes in the bones have occurred, the foot can be made perfectly straight so that walking on the sole is permitted, but there is greater arrest of development, and appreciable deficiency in height is noted.

The most important lesson which parents, who bring children with this deformity into the world, have to learn is that it is no disgrace and no fault of their own, and that persistent treatment will always result in a completely satisfactory result. Early discouragements must be disregarded, and for the sake of the child's future happiness, repeated manipulation insisted upon.

CAKE MAKING DO'S AND DON'TS GIVEN IN MRS. THURN'S LETTER

Dear Friends in Circleville:
So many of you have asked me questions about various phases of cake making that once more I want to give in some detail the do's and don'ts for general cake procedure. Of course you who have good cook books and use them faithfully as reference books know these pointers. In addition to a quality cook book you should have a good range, one preferably with an oven control and which has a well insulated oven, so that the correct baking temperature may be set and kept the desired time.

But most important of all you must read directions and follow them accurately; a good recipe and a good range will not make a good cake unless you know how to use both correctly.

Some Things to Do

Read the recipe; get out the essential tools and utensils; get out the ingredients; measure the ingredients, checking with the recipe as you do each thing. Mix as directed; prepare pans as directed. Be sure the oven temperature is correct before putting the cake in the oven. Correct according to recipe, and if recipe does not state then correct for the type of cake. Do not bake different kinds of cakes at the same time, for small and layer cakes call for hotter oven than a loaf cake. Place the cake on a lower grate of the oven, near the center. Do not open the oven door until the cake has had time to form; do not move pan when you open the oven; if browning too fast, lay a piece of paper over the cake; when done, the cake has shrunk from the sides of the pan and when pressed gently with a finger it springs back. Insert a straw or toothpick in the center of the loaf or layer and if it comes out clean it is done; this should be in accordance with the recipe directions for time also.

What's the Matter?

If the cake falls or is too heavy it may be due to too slow an oven, uneven temperature; moving of pan soon after baking starts; too much sugar; too much fat; too little flour.

If the cake is coarse grained it may be due to too much baking powder; too slow an oven; too little mixing.

If the cake cracks it may be because there is too much flour; too hot an oven.

If the cake puffs up in the middle or one side it may be due to a bad position in the oven; uneven heat of oven due to poor insulation; shifting of temperature due to turning up and down of heat; it may be due to too much flour.

Rough edges usually mean too much sugar; or poor mixing; too much fat; or too little flour.

If you have faithfully followed a recipe and still have poor results it may be that the recipe needs correcting which you can do with a little experimentation; or it may be the fault of the range.

Cake Baking Temperatures
Unless otherwise stated the following temperatures are correct for the different kinds of cakes:

Loaves, moderate oven, 350 to 400 degrees, for forty minutes; with fruit 350 degrees, and the time depends on the thickness of the loaf; with molasses or chocolate, 350 degrees, and the time depends on the thickness; a rich fruit loaf, 350 degrees or low temperature, baked for one hour or more.

Sponge Cake or Angel Cake, 320 degrees F., or slow oven, one hour. Layer Cake, 375 degrees, or moderate, for twenty minutes, unless otherwise specified by the recipe. Small cakes and cup cakes, 350 degrees to 400 degrees, or moderate oven, 25 minutes, unless otherwise specified.

Cookies, 450 degrees, hot oven, six to eight minutes; with chocolate or molasses or much fruit, 375 degrees, or moderate, fifteen to eighteen minutes.

Drop Cookies, 425 degrees, moderate oven, twelve minutes. Wafers, 400 degrees, or moderate, ten minutes.

Macaroons, 300 degrees, slow, for twenty minutes.

My Favorite Spice Cake
This is a recipe which will always give a good cake, suitable for the lunch box of tea table, or for dessert at luncheon or dinner.

One and seven eighths cup flour; one cup sugar; one half cup shortening; two eggs; two teaspoons cinnamon; one cup sour milk or cream; one fourth teaspoon salt; one half teaspoon nutmeg; one half teaspoon ground cloves; one and seven eighths teaspoons baking powder; one half teaspoon soda; two thirds cup seedless raisins or currants.

Blend the shortening and sugar thoroughly, adding the well beaten eggs; then sift all the dry ingredients with flour twice, add alternately with milk or cream to the first mixture. When well mixed add the raisins or currants dredge with a little flour. Bake in layers in a moderate oven, 375 degrees, about twenty minutes. Ice with boiled icing, thickly.

Dishes Designed For Lenten Menus; Fish and Sea Food

During the weeks preceding Easter many of us prefer to eliminate meat from the dietary and in its place to use fish, eggs, fowl and an increased amount of vegetables. With the latter if fish and eggs are omitted, cheese should be plentiful. It is best to keep up to the essential protein of the customary diet.

These fish and sea foods recipes are simple, they may be made with canned fish if there is no fresh fish available in your community, and in combination with such cereals as macaroni and rice they make nourishing, well balanced meals.

VARSAITY, ALUMNI TO MEET

LINEUP THAT WON HONORS 1931 INTACT

Contest to Follow Two Class Games One of Which Is For Title

Basketball as it was played in 1931 and as it is played today will be shown at the high school this evening when the alumni, comprised entirely of the team that won the championship of the Central Buckeye league four years ago, meets the high school varsity.

The game will start about 8:15. The lineups of the two principals will be:

High School — Purcell, Grant, W. Hegele, Stout, Davis, Heiskell.

Griffith will probably see a lot of service at the tip-off position for the varsity with Ned Thacher, sixth member of the title team, to get some action for the alumni. Billy Steele will also be a member of the alumni squad.

The first game, that for the intramural championship between sophomore and junior girls, will start at 7 o'clock with a game between sophomore and senior boys booked next.

A good crowd is expected to see the games.

WESLEYAN RELAYS TO BE APRIL 27

DELAWARE, March 8 — The fourth annual Ohio Wesleyan High School Relays will be staged on Selby field here Saturday, April 27, George Gauthier, manager of the meet, announced today.

This year's meet, according to Gauthier, is expected to draw an entry list of approximately 1,000 boys. Almost 900 participated last year, when Toledo Scott won the class A title and New London took the class B event.

The Ohio Wesleyan Relays are unique in that every event is a team affair. Three boys compete in each of the six field events and they comprise a team in each of the six running races. The relays were first started in 1932.

TROSKY IMPROVES

NEW ORLEANS, March 8. Yesterday's practice session of the Cleveland Indians on a field ankle deep in mud today brought out one satisfactory fact—that Hal Trosky is a much improved first baseman. "He credited his improvement around the sack to a winter spent 'in thinking over' his fielding faults of last season. During the first batting session of the year, Earl Averill hit a long home run over the right field wall.

She estimated the lump was worth about $15,000.

Ashville to Banquet

Ashville's basketball fans remain undaunted. They are going to have a big basketball banquet next Thursday to celebrate a fine season, bottled only by the boys' defeat at the hands of New Holland in the tournament. Special tributes will be paid to the girls who have won much distinction under Coach Stella Morrison.

The annual banquet of the Pickaway-co Farmers and Sportsman's association will be held next Thursday and plans are going forward for a big attendance.

Record Good One

The record of the organization in this county is a real one. It has been co-operating with the division of conservation and has received the following allotment of fish and game distributed in 1934 and up to date in 1935: 400 pheasants, 251 rabbits, seven raccoons, 750 channel cat fish, 140 black bass, 250 rock bass, 800 crappies, 10,000 rock bass fingerlings, 15,000 black bass fingerlings and 8,000 blue gills fingerlings—the total number of matured and finger-length fish distributed in streams of the county was 21,440.

Sportsmen urge all hunters and fishers to obtain their licenses from members of the sportsman's association, H. E. Betz, Pettit Tire Shop and Barrer-Nickerson Hardware as all proceeds go to propagation of fish and game.

Harry Botholomew, secretary of the organization, has not yet announced the speaker for the big feed. Another good program will be provided.

SPEED RACER MAY TRY FOR NEW RECORD

Campbell Uncertain of Plans; May Await More Favorable Beach

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla., Mar. 8 — Sir Malcolm Campbell, English speed merchant who cracked world's land speed record yesterday was undecided today whether he will ship his Bluebird super racer back to England or await a more favorable beach and try for a higher speed.

"I am satisfied the Bluebird has much more speed than I have attained," he said. "The whole question hinges on whether the beach will improve or get worse with passing time. I am advised it should be better at high tide during full moon about 18th but I am undecided what to do."

Sir Malcolm had the closest call of his racing career he disclosed following his record run.

"As I was entering the measured mile on the north run the car hit a bump and for another mile I was all over the beach and barely missed running into the dunes," said Sir Malcolm. "My tires were ripped to pieces and it is miraculous that they held together."

Visibility Poor

"The course was fairly good but I picked up a mist on my windshield which made visibility poor at times. The run as a whole however, was not bad and I am glad that I have at last been able to break the record of two years ago. "I suffered an injured wrist shortly after starting while changing gears. This is a harder feat than one might think at such speed. It really however, is just an old sprain. Other than being shaken up I suffered no ill effects from the run."

Sir Malcolm really broke four different records in his super racer, including a new world's land speed record.

They are: one mile, miles per hour 276.816 the time 13.005; kilo, 281.374 miles per hour; time 8.10; five mile, mph 235.141 the time 1:11.60; five kilo, miles per hour 268.474. All miles are average.

LOUIS TOO YOUNG TO BATTLE BAER, REFEREE DECLARES

SAN FRANCISCO, March 8 — Joe Louis, the sensational negro boxer from Detroit, is too young to fight Max Baer.

Authority for that statement is Light, Commander Jesse Kenworthy, U. S. N., noted ring expert. Kenworthy refereed the fight in Los Angeles two weeks ago when Louis knocked out Lee Ramo, a 20-year-old heavyweight.

"Louis is only 20 years old and this is too young for him to prepare for a championship fight," Kenworthy said. "If I was his manager, I wouldn't let him go after the title until he is 24 years old."

Tonight Donald ("Red") Barry, the Washington, D. C., battler, meets Louis in a ten-round bout.

Louis, who has won five straight battles—thirteen of them by knockouts—since entering the professional fight game, is confident he will add Barry's name to his list of victims.

Among the interested spectators tonight will be Max Baer himself. Ring followers declare the champion is rickety a "scouting tip," being fully aware he may some day defend his crown against the Detroit derby demon.

KENDALL MAY NEAR TOP IN PURE OIL CO.

Is Superintendent of Midland Refinery; Climb Recounted In Magazine

EDITOR'S NOTE: Kendall B. May, son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles H. May, S. Court-st. has been making rapid strides in the front rank as an employee of the Pure Oil Co. In a recent issue of the "Pure Oil News", publication of the company, his picture was printed on the front cover with a complete story of his activities with the company found on an inside page. The story follows:

Kendall B. May was appointed superintendent of Midland Refinery Sept. 1, 1933. Previous to this he had held positions of varying capacities since starting with the Pure Oil Company in the summer of 1922. This was just after graduating from Circleville High school, and his first position was in the Stock Transfer Department at Columbus Office. At the end of this summer he matriculated at Wooster College, Wooster, O. After two years study, he transferred to Ohio State University and continued his studies in chemical engineering. However, his summer vacation of 1924 found him working again, this time in the laboratory of Heath Refinery.

In the summer of 1925 he started work at the old Complanter Refinery and advanced from one position to another until by January, 1927, he had acquired operating experience in all departments. It was at this time that Complanter Refinery was dismantled and his experience was such that he was one of the few selected to be on hand until all finished products had been shipped out. After this he was sent to Cabin Creek Refinery as assistant resident chemist. Meanwhile the Gyro cracking process had proved itself and the first units within the Pure Oil Company were constructed at Cabin Creek.

Sensing the opportunities this offered and also having the desired qualifications, he became one of the first operators of these particular units. Not long afterwards, in 1929 his abilities were rewarded by being appointed head gyro foreman, a position he held until August, 1932, when he was made assistant superintendent of Midland Refinery.

Slightly more than a year later, in September, 1933, he became superintendent.

To say that he is popular with his personnel is putting it mildly. At the same time he has the faculty of combining this popularity with an unrelenting demand that each employee discharge his given duties as instructed. Perhaps this last mentioned quality might serve as ample reason for his remarkable rise.

He was born in Circleville, Ohio, April 2, 1904, is happily married and the proud father of a sixteen months old son, Richard Bennett May. Mrs. May until Aug. 6, 1929, was Miss Ethel McIntosh of Warren, Pa.

tory salaries if the legislature insists.

Governor Davey asked the legislature for more than twice the sum for the executive offices that Governor White spent during his second term. White got $72,471 for the last two years, Davey requested $145,680.

Executive office salaries cost Ohio an average of $29,444 a year under White, Davey asked for $53,040; White spent $440 for office supplies in 1934, Davey wanted $2,400 for 1935 and a like sum for 1936; postage the last year of the White administration cost $1,793, Davey estimated he would require $4,000; communication White's last year cost $1,907, Davey wanted $5,000 annually.

According to Governor Davey's own figures it will cost $26,018 more for office maintenance alone during his two years in office than his predecessor found it necessary to spend.

He requested $27,651 to run the executive mansion for two years, as compared with an expenditure of $19,146 by former Governor White for a corresponding period.

In an explanatory statement accompanying the budget the governor called attention to the $8,700,000 increase over the appropriation for the previous biennium, but failed to mention the increased outlay for the executive office and mansion.

Bevis recalled that the appropriation bill for the preceding biennium contained no specific sum for state aid to weak school districts; however, the cigarette tax for 1933-34 was used for this purpose. The cigarette tax for 1935 already is encumbered to retire notes issued by board of education in state aid school districts for 1934 obligations.

None From Sales Tax

It must be borne in mind that none of the foregoing appropriations are to be made against receipts from the new retail sales tax, which is estimated to yield $60,000,000 a year. Except a small fraction for administrative purposes, the state appropriates none of this for its own use, but distributes it all among schools, local governments, old age pensions and poor relief.

Davey recommended an increase of $74,920 for the state utilities commission, but this was $121,333 short of the sum asked by Chairman E. J. Hopple for the next two years. Hopple has asked for $150,000 in addition to the normal appropriation so that engineers and accountants might be employed to speed up action on rate appeals.

The legislature was asked to appropriate $2,688,719 for the state tax commission and eight of its sub-divisions, or $499,280 more than was spent on the same units during the preceding two years. The $2,688,719 does not include the cost of administering the retail sales tax, for which $625,000 already has been appropriated to cover only the first six months of 1935.

Attorney General Bricker was allowed an increase of $27,435 for the next two years, his department being budgeted for $307,990. Secretary of State Myers was listed for an increase of $4,239, or a total of $174,814; State Auditor Tracy for an increase of $19,595, or a total of $19,595, and Treasurer Day for an increase of $35,006, or a total of $168,280.
